

A case of polygyny in the Bornean white-bearded gibbon (Hylobates albibarbis)

Carolyn Thompson^{a,b,c,*}, Eka Cahyaningrum^a, H          ^a, Abdul Aziz^{a,d},
Susan M. Cheyne^{a,e}

^aThe Borneo Nature Foundation (BNF), Jalan Bukit Raya, Palangka Raya, Central
Kalimantan, 74874, Indonesia

^bGenetics Evolution and Environment, University College London, Gower St, Bloomsbury,
London WC1E 6BT, UK

^cInstitute of Zoology, Zoological Society of London, Regent's Park, London, NW1 4RY, UK

^dCentre for International Cooperation in the Management of Tropical Peatlands (CIMTROP),
University of Palangka Raya, Palangka Raya, Central Kalimantan, 74874, Indonesia

^eFaculty of Humanities, Social Sciences and Law, Oxford Brookes University, Headington
Road, Headington, Oxford, OX3 0BP, UK

*Corresponding author; e-mail: carolyn.thompson.17@ucl.ac.uk

Supplementary material

Video S1. The two adult females singing the great call in unison recorded using Logic X Pro.