

Contrasting genetic diversity in the genus Acanthodactylus (Squamata: Lacertidae) at its eastern distribution edge

Daniel Jablonski^{1,#,}, Muazzam A. Khan^{2,#}, Christian Kehlmaier³, Rafaqat Masroor⁴, Muhammad Sajid Nadeem⁵, Uwe Fritz^{3,}

1 – Department of Zoology, Comenius University in Bratislava, Ilkovičova 6, Mlynská dolina, 842 15 Bratislava, Slovakia

2 – Department of Botany, Bacha Khan University, Charsadda, Pakistan

3 – Senckenberg Dresden, Museum of Zoology, A. B. Meyer Building, 01109 Dresden, Germany

4 – Zoological Sciences Division, Pakistan Museum of Natural History, Islamabad, Pakistan

5 – Department of Zoology, PMAS-Arid Agricultural University, Rawalpindi, Pakistan

#These authors contributed equally to this article.

*Corresponding author; e-mails: daniel.jablonski@uniba.sk, uwe.fritz@senckenberg.de

Supplementary material

Table S1. Primers used for amplification and sequencing and PCR conditions.

Table S2. Sequences of the genus Acanthodactylus used for the cytochrome b tree.